

Hello Peter...I just wanted to let you know that today I followed your guidance about giving his "power and sense of self back" and I while was crawling up our stairs with us close behind her, I whispered to him, " , do you see crawling up the stairs? Do you know where she learned that and who she is imitating?" said "Daddy?" I said "No, she is imitating you and you by watching you, she has learned to do this! You have taught your sister how to climb the stairs! You are a wonderful teacher and a wonderful big brother!" He BEAMED from ear to ear and everyone we encountered today heard about how he has taught to climb the stairs.... We had several temper tantrums and several other "challenging moments" but I think that we are headed in the right direction - thanks to you Peter.

I will definitely be sending you some compensation for your time and interest in helping me with some time in the next couple of weeks. I know that you said money isn't that important to you, and I cannot afford to send you alot, but I will be sending something and wanted you to know that the simple fact that you were willing to listen and give us some advice means so much to us. If I were wealthy, I'd send you so much more, for your time and knowledge is invaluable.

Thanks Peter!!

Warmest Regards,
